TWO

DOUBLEBENT SNAKES

Greg McClure

two doublebent snakes slither out from their father's nest hand raised as if to say yield before i force you oh God hold back the skies chaos rains from the clouds in metal casings cursing my house with disorder and i toiled so long in that garden my son wakes two minutes before dawn by sun up his room is barren drowned by the horizon
he leaves somberly
ill news in official envelopes and my roses are uprooted my house transforms instantly and portrays all else five years i cry fruitlessly these envelopes come too frequently because there never is any they bear no good news
