An Immense Moment

A sensation of adrenaline fills my body while my first concert prepares to begin at American Airlines center. I am sitting in a black abyss with nothing to see but small stars in the ceiling, an arena full of strangers with chairs so close, yet soft cushions like clouds in the sky. A sudden wave of white light blossoms like a flower in the ceiling, revealing the dirt floor stage below us being surrounded by chairs for the Dallas audience. Energetic fast-paced music approaching from the speakers around us makes my heart pound and beat faster with excitement. An announcer introduces a young and beautiful singer named Angela Aguilar. Hearing her name fills me with a tremendous amount of joy, making me jump out of my seat cheering and screaming. The young woman approaches the field wearing a gorgeous black dress with flowers colored like the rainbow, galloping on a big, beautiful coffee brown horse, stomping on the dirt field making clouds of dust appear in the air. Every time the horse gallops around the field, the smell of fresh dirt breezes through my nose. The soft hands of my partner reach my hand in a manner that says it is okay to get over excited. On the last music note a bomb of light ascends the field, persuading the Dallas crowd to stand and clap like a million fireworks. A strobe of light goes around the stadium making the immense moment come to life. The last few moments create a bubble uniting everyone together towards the center of the stadium for one last cheer. Being in the stadium with people I love smiling brightly as the sun from the amazing time we are sharing fills my heart with butterflies.
