Machine Heart

COLBY DOMINO

Looking back on the ups
the downs

I tape those scattered memories
together in my mind
like film
for a midnight showing at an empty theatre located somewhere between where I am,
where I used to be,
a few milligrams of distraction
and where I want to go.
Replacing the award winning roles and script with a new generation of temporary friends
I have forced myself
to know and love

to make up for the ones
I lost along the way.
I try to organize and make sense of the madness.
Like a desperate attempt to repair a broken cup
for one last use.
Throughout everything
The ins
The outs
I still have life in my veins
I still have fire in my bones.
I still see the colors
and I still hear the music.
I'm going through changes
but in the end
I know it's going to be ok.
With a hungry spirit
I hold steadfast.
With a Machine Heart
I am still the lion man.
