5-1-2009

Drawings: Dwight, Untitled

James G. Robinson

Follow this and additional works at: https://digitalcommons.collin.edu/forces

Recommended Citation
Available at: https://digitalcommons.collin.edu/forces/vol2009/iss1/19

This Painting is brought to you for free and open access by DigitalCommons@Collin. It has been accepted for inclusion in Forces by an authorized editor of DigitalCommons@Collin. For more information, please contact mtomlin@collin.edu.
And I saw the allergic reaction to freedom-
With deformed baby twins of war born to burn-
Hugging each other with eyes closed to us forever
In the yellowed Ho Chi Minh agent orange water jar.

I felt sweet cooked powder shot into my veins.
And the smells of South Asian love that numbed the final days of my life
As I was ordered to put a gun into many mothers’ mouths.

And then my legs treaded Christmas ’74 through the Mekong Delta
Under trees I hoped were topped by angels.

The day my aching thinned ribs smiled through my naked Viet Cong skin
As they grabbed sweet air in the smoking Trang Pan village-
My eyes napalm glossed and shuttered shut.

A plaid-shirted Saigon grimacing
As I raised a pistol to its head-
With frantic crowds rushing the embassy rooftop as the last Army bird flew away.

Then after an hour of this endless three millimeters I finally escaped that dark room-
Rolling my redlight paralyzed eyes through an empty sidewalk sterile street parade-
Fleeing the panoramic chaos of Vietnam seven years before I was born-
Having died many deaths and asked many questions
In a part of my history I never understood until now.