JACOB NORTEY

I dance freely in the eye of the sun
To the beautiful sound of nature's music.
From a distance, I could hear the trees singing,
Making a joyful noise with their hands clapping.

For the majesty of a mighty waterfall
Brings all creatures together, both mild and wild,
Drinking away their thirst into a long lasting life
At the dawn of every new season.

The life and splendor of the earth's greatest light,
Has come to an end, as his successor is enthroned.
In the dazzling sparkles of the night sky,
I run naked in the forest under the moonlight.
