

Forces

Volume 2022

Article 77

4-12-2022

Watering

Tonya McMillon

Follow this and additional works at: <https://digitalcommons.collin.edu/forces>

Recommended Citation

McMillon, Tonya (2022) "Watering," Forces: Vol. 2022 , Article 77.

Available at: <https://digitalcommons.collin.edu/forces/vol2022/iss1/77>

This Photograph is brought to you for free and open access by DigitalCommons@Collin. It has been accepted for inclusion in Forces by an authorized editor of DigitalCommons@Collin. For more information, please contact mtomlin@collin.edu.

Watering Tonya McMillon

The dragging, scorching summer ultimately breaks into the easy breath of fall.

Waterdrops Melissa Balderos Rios

The In-between

Susan Mardele

Waiting is a talent worth cultivating.
It's not a popular tune,
But a fruitful one
if, hands clapped on ears,
Singing, la, la, la, we ignore urgent calls to premature action.
There is a time for all things.
The move that couldn't happen yesterday,
falls in place today.
The days of solitude that seemed never to end,

Become the joy of warm companionship
in due time.
The dragging, scorching summer
ultimately breaks into the easy breath of fall.
There are gifts in the waiting,
quiet days, time to ponder.
It's more difficult to look inside
during times of action.
But memory, kind memory
captures only a sequence of events,
Forgetting the unwanted cousin...
the in-between.