Jeopardy and Peanuts

Matthew Ring

People remember big things like buildings and mountains
But often forget the small
We forget pennies, receipts, the last time you talked to someone
But when they become small
You carry them with you so they're easy to remember
You may not realize it but they're always in your pocket waiting to pop out
They'll remind you when you see the show they would always watch
When you pass by the snack they always eat
When you hear something they always say
It's never too loud, just enough to remind you that they are there
People say if you can't see it, it doesn't exist
And we may forget the small
But we remember jeopardy and peanuts.
